March 19, 2015

Hillary Potter, associate professor of ethnic studies at the University of Colorado at Boulder, presents "After the Blood Dries: An Examination of Law Enforcement, Community Action and Justice Regarding the Michael Brown Homicide" at 11:30 a.m. Monday, April 13, in Room 130 of the Pollak Library. Potter is researching men's use of violence, intimate partner abuse against women of color, and anti-violence activism in black and Latino communities.

The College of Humanities & Social Sciences, the Division of Politics, Administration and Justice and ethnic studies departments are sponsoring the lecture. Additional information is available online.

TAGS: Academics & Research, Events