April 17, 2015

This year's University Awards program honored employees reaching five-year service milestones, a group that includes David Pagni, professor of mathematics, marking his 45th year of teaching.

The educator has spent his career helping students of all ages understand and appreciate mathematics, and secured millions of dollars in grant funding for partnerships between the University and county school districts that have helped produce systemic changes in the way math is taught in our public schools.

Pagni continues to lead the annual Project MISS, a four-week summer program that has helped more than 1,500 high school girls from underrepresented groups improve their mathematical skills, and enroll in and complete college.

Such efforts have earned the scholar numerous accolades, including the Presidential Award for Excellence in Science, Mathematics and Engineering Mentoring; the Orange County Hispanic Education Endowment’s Apple of Gold for Educational Leadership; Outstanding Professor Award from Cal State Fullerton and the California State University; and the CSU Wang Family Excellence Award.
